

EVELYN THAW TO BE WITNESS FOR HUSBAND

Decides to Undergo Ordeal and Tell All About Stanford White.

LAWYER RAND ENGAGED

Jerome's Former Chief of Staff Will Conduct Case in Court.

OSBORNE MAY AID HIM.

Alienists Retained by Olcott Firm Find Themselves in a Predicament.

It was reported to-day on good authority that William Rand, Jr., will be principal counsel in the defense of Harry Kendall Thaw when the young Pittsburgh millionaire is placed on trial for the murder of Stanford White.

Overtures have also been made looking to the retention of the services of James W. Osborne in Thaw's behalf, but Mr. Osborne is in Europe and no definite arrangement has been made.

Another report from authoritative sources concerning the approaching trial is that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will take the stand in her husband's defense. It will take effort work to get from her the Thaw side of the tragedy and still leave no opening for the prosecution, to bring out, on cross-examination, the whole story of the relations of the young woman and Stanford White.

Mr. Rand's skill is counted upon to tide Mrs. Thaw over the embarrassing places and place her evidence before the jury in a favorable light. But the prosecution has gone deeply into the part Mrs. Thaw played in the tragedy, and no sympathy goes out to her from the District-Attorney's office. The slightest break in her testimony would furnish the prosecution with material for an onslaught that may destroy the force of her evidence and her appearance in her husband's behalf.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

Mr. Clifford Harridge, Thaw's attorney, appeared to be surprised to-day when told of the current report that he had been retained by the defense.

MAN 65 YEARS OLD RESCUES A DROWNING BOY

Dockmaster Bollas, Despite His Years, Bravely Plunges Into River.

STRUGGLE A HARD ONE.

Hell Gate Current Would Have Swept Him Away but for Help.

Despite the fact that he is nearing the three-score and ten mark, Walter O. Bollas, the sixty-five-year-old dockmaster at the foot of East One Hundredth street, did not hesitate a moment to plunge into the water when a young boy was seen struggling in the Hell Gate current. The boy, who was about ten years old, had fallen into the treacherous current that sweeps down to Hell Gate. Mr. Bollas, who is a man of one-third his years, and shouting encouragement to the drowning boy, Samuel Goodman, eight years old, of No. 21 East One Hundredth street, was at his side in a few moments. At that he was only just in time, for Sammy, who cannot swim, was going down for the last time when his aged savior took a firm grip of his coat collar.

Boy Grasped His Neck.

"Keep still," cried Bollas to the terrified boy who clung desperately to him, seriously impeding the sweep of his arms against the strong current. But the boy was far too terrified to heed his rescuer's words. He clung like a leech about the old man's shoulders. Bollas, though a fine swimmer, began to feel the weight of his years as he toiled with the boy clinging to him against the downward sweep of the tide. To the watchers on the wharf, who had witnessed his gallant plunge and encouraged him with cheers, he did not seem to gain an inch in the boiling water. Then, very gradually, he seemed to be swept further out from shore. The look in his face told the onlookers that the struggle was getting the better of the strong.

Suddenly a man ran down the wharf, springing about the leg of James P. Flannery, which is moored at the foot of the dock, and catching up a coil of rope sent it dexterously snaking over the water toward the exhausted old man and the boy clutching his neck.

Managed to Seize Rope. The end of it fell just beyond Bollas's reach, but with a last effort he managed to grasp it. His strength was about gone, and all he could do was to hold on while the tug of the rope almost pulled the man on the barge into the river. A score of hands, however, were in a minute helping him to pull the old man slowly, for they feared to overtax his strength, toward the wharf and safety. They pulled him on to the barge just in time.

"One while boy!" gasped Bollas, as he caught his breath. "I guess I ain't as strong as I used to be for a pretty high tuckered out."

Then they looked round for Sammy, but Sammy had decamped for home. As for the man who threw the rope that saved him, he was really the best protection officer, outside of James W. Osborne, in the District-Attorney's office in years.

Mr. Rand adds interest to any case in which he is interested.

Assistant District-Attorney Ely will probably direct the prosecution of young Mr. Thaw, assisted by Assistant District-Attorney Garvan, who has had charge of the preparation of the case.

The District-Attorney insists that the case of Harry Thaw is a plain case of murder in the first degree—a wilful, deliberate, premeditated assassination.

Evidence has been secured to show that instead of White pursuing Evelyn Nesbit after her marriage to Harry Thaw the pursuit was on the other side.

Mr. Ely, in his career as a prosecuting officer, has acquired some fame for his disregard for the feelings of witnesses, and Mrs. Thaw is in for an interesting time with him if she goes on the stand in her husband's defense.

Willing Witnesses Left.

While many witnesses whose evidence would aid the prosecution have mysteriously disappeared, there is quite an army left. Most of these are willing witnesses, persons who for one reason or another are unfavorably disposed toward Thaw and his wife.

Before the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Boyne was dropped from the Thaw defense six eminent alienists examined Harry Thaw and sent their bills to his lawyers. These alienists all agree that Thaw is insane today and was undoubtedly insane when he shot Stanford White.

As matters now stand these mental experts do not know whether the dismissal of the lawyers who employed them means that they are no longer in the employ of the defense. The experts are therefore in a peculiar position. They have already committed themselves to the statement that Thaw is insane, and if they are notified that Thaw has no use for their services they could not be retained by the State to offset Thaw's plea of emotional insanity. They could be retained by the State, however, to establish Thaw's present insanity as a preliminary to his incarceration in Matteawan Asylum, a fact that he dreads and has been fighting against.

Insane in His Egotism. Whether Thaw is a victim of something to be termed, but that he is a victim of a form of insanity—love, of self-belief—men who have had occasion to observe him since he first entered the Tombs. They say he is one of the greatest egotists of the time, and have in the majority of cases said to him: He has persuaded himself that all he will have to do is sit there twelve hours and on-and-on and make them see that a great man and public benefactor he is.

Harry Thaw's mother and wife visited him in the Tombs today. They arrived at the prison in young Mrs. Thaw's electric brougham, Harry after spending an hour there returned to the Hotel Lorraine.

Dear Sir—I return you, with my compliments, the elegant shipment of fruit, delicatessen, etc., and regret to say that it reached me in the evening instead of the morning.

I enclose in each of the boxes a small amount of the Oriental business as you seem to think, but not wishing to have them to waste, I return same by United States express, and would suggest that before making any more such shipments you would ascertain the conditions that prevail in this section. We are allowed a little fruit in the morning, and they limit us to one variety, which we are able to procure here in quite a satisfactory manner. I think it would be well to dispose of superfluous presentations of this kind in some other section.

Yours truly, THOMAS E. SOMERS.

Yours truly, THOMAS E. SOMERS.

GRACEMO CASSINI QUITS RUSSIAN CHURCH FOR ROME

Countess, Former Friend of President's Daughter, Is Convert.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—

Diplomatic and official society here is greatly surprised to learn that Mile. Marguerite Cassini, the adopted daughter of Count Cassini, formerly Russian Ambassador to the United States, now representing the Czar at the court of Madrid, had abandoned the Russian State Church and joined the Roman Catholic communion.

Mile. Cassini was the chum of Miss Alice Roosevelt before the latter became Mrs. Longworth.

The Russian Church is so much a part of the Russian Government, and apostasy is regarded in official circles as such a heinous act, that the pretty Russian woman sacrifices all hope of recognition at the court of St. Petersburg, if, indeed, she does not run the risk of persecution and absolute social ostracism.

Such an act as she has committed would, two years ago, have been punishable by confiscation of all the subject's property and imprisonment in a monastery or fortress. But the toleration of the Czar, published since the war, was a revolutionary act of the autocracy, abandoned all punishment for apostasy, and granted religious freedom.

It is hinted here that the social prospects of the Countess Cassini were never of the best in St. Petersburg. This belief is accentuated by the known fact that she has been estranged from Count Cassini for some time. She has been living in Paris, while he was at Madrid.

The antecedents of the Countess Cassini are shrouded in mystery. She was only a schoolgirl when she came here with the Russian diplomat. He gave out that she was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him.

His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward. Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

On returning to Europe, Count Cassini announced that the Czar had granted official recognition to his adopted daughter, and she was named the title of Countess. In diplomatic circles she immediately proceeded to assume the title of Countess.

The result was a social success. She was the daughter of a nephew who died, willing the little girl to him. His wife was dead and his own sons and daughters had grown up, so he became very much attached to his ward.

Before she was introduced to society here she was a well-known figure, her daring riding and her great beauty attracting much attention.

THANK GRIP FALL OF DYNAMITE WAS TO BLOW KING

Gracemo Tanalare Caught by the Hoboken Police as He Was About to Sail on Cretic with a Quantity of Explosive.

A gripsack loaded with dynamite and 42-calibre cartridges constituted the baggage of Gracemo Tanalare, who had engaged passage on the Cretic, which sailed to-day from Hoboken for Genoa. Tanalare was not allowed to sail, and the Hoboken police, in whose custody he is, are of the opinion that he is an Anarchist who contemplated the assassination of the King of Italy or some other European sovereign.

Because of the close scrutiny kept on the Anarchists on the Continent these days explosives are hard to obtain, but in this country any one may buy dynamite if he has the price. Tanalare has refused to tell where he bought the explosive, and has sprung so many contradictory stories that the suspicion of his anarchistic intentions is continually strengthened.

There is a lot of mystery about the case, but from the circumstances under which the bag was found it is believed that Tanalare was the owner.

On returning to the United States agent for a band of revolutionists. It is thought that the bag was loaded with dynamite and cartridges, and left at a designated spot to be picked up by Tanalare and taken aboard the ship.

Policeman Found the Bag. Policeman Christopher Stanton found the bag last night crouching in an angle in the wall of a building at Twelfth and Willow streets. He carried it to the Second Precinct Station, where it was opened. The dynamite was wrapped in paper, but the cartridges, fifty in number, were loose.

A flash of deduction that would have done credit to Sherlock Holmes possessed the police authorities. They figured that a bag containing such a dangerous load was not left on the street accidentally, and that the owner or some one for whose use it had been placed on the corner might happen along to claim it. The dynamite and cartridges were removed and Stanton went back and placed the bag, which had been weighted with stones, in the corner where he had found it.

Then he stationed himself across the street, screened from observation, and waited. After a time a man skulked along in the shadow of the buildings, made for the grip, picked it up and started along Willow street at a fast walk.

In three jumps Stanton was on him. The man threw the bag away as soon as he felt the grip of the policeman's hand and started to put up a fight, but was subdued in a hurry. He was

He Came Here in May. Acting Chief of Police Bell is disposed to believe that in Tanalare he has an important captive. Already such investigations as have been possible have shown that the man misnamed facts concerning himself. The records of Ellis Island betray that he came to this country from Italy on May 15, 1904.

"This man," said Chief Bell this afternoon, "is, I believe, an important personage for Anarchist groups in this country and Europe. I have received information that leads me to believe he is really Gracemo Tanalare, a professor of chemistry in Naples, whose anarchistic tendencies are well known. You will notice that he was under arrest here for some time in May, 1904."

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

He was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

RIGO'S BLOOD STIRS TROUBLE FOR FIDDLER

Chews Leg of a Perfect Stranger and Owner Must Go to Court.

Rigo, the fiddler, has a French bulldog with a weakness for trousers. Louis Kahn, owner of the Barometer Stables, No. 13 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, appeared in the Harlem Court to-day to exhibit an openwork trouser leg which he said was the dog's tooth work. Kahn wanted a summons for Rigo, although he admitted the dog did the biting.

Kahn says he was out for a stroll this morning with his own bulldog, Turk, when, at Lenox avenue and East Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, he met Rigo chasing his French bulldog, Cartouche. The latter went for Turk.

Kahn deposes that the said Cartouche did bite, gnaw, mangle and maim the lower portion of Kahn's trouser leg when the said leg was introduced into the plot to pry the dogs apart. The dogs chewed each other for fifteen minutes. AJAX Whitman came along and did not try to separate the fighters for fear of having the dog on his sleeves bitten. When the bulldogs, wearied of their sport, AJAX pulled Cartouche away.

Kahn took his dog and turned him into a doghouse. He said that he was taking the dynamite to his friend, Damiano Anselmi, a professor of chemistry in Italy. He refused to tell what town in Italy he was going to after leaving the ship at Genoa. He said he had purchased the dynamite in Hudson, N. Y., and in the next breath proclaimed that he was not in Hudson in his life.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

Tanalare was held on suspicion and arraigned before Acting Recorder Laverty to-day. The Recorder remanded him until Monday to give the police time to investigate some of his contradictory statements. He is thirty years old, and says he came to the United States fourteen months ago.

100 STRIKERS SABRED; 66,000 OUT IN CAPITAL.

Dragoons Attack with Swords 6,000 Marchers in Procession—St. Petersburg Movement General, but Leaders Are Demoralized.

UZOVKA, Russia, Aug. 4.—The situation here is very serious. At Donetsk, the centre of the mining and smelting industry, 6,000 strikers marched to-day singing the "Marseillaise" to the residence of Gov.-Gen. Hartung, and demanded the release of strikers arrested at last night's meeting. Many carried clubs.

The Governor-General refused to release the prisoners and when the processionists declined to obey a summons to disperse, a detachment of dragoons swept down on them with sabres and whips, wounding about a hundred persons, some of them seriously.

Wholesale arrests were made, including